

Whenever possible, I use natural materials that respect nature and try to echo its patterns. The designs reference archetypal forms of the past, and yet are thoroughly contemporary. They use computer technology for design and manufacture, yet are also made with the finest traditional craft skills. They are designed to endure in material, making and aesthetics. Their impact on the planet is minimal, but their impact on our lives is emotional and lasting.

The Red Dot Award winning fixture is shown next to its namesake Nikau, an indigenous New Zealand palm tree.

The Nikau light produces dramatic shadows when there is less ambient light.

The top of the Nikau can be removed by gently pulling on the connection with the top piece. The top is then removed from the fixture for relamping, and then easily reattached by pushing the rivets back into the top piece.
